Commission supports protection of homes

By Don Green

During its fourth public hearing this month on the southeast quadrant, the Upland Planning Commission last week moved to protect single-family homes from possible encroachment by higher-density residential development.

The commission at its March 23 meeting recommended changes in land-use designations affecting 215 of the 514 total acres directly touched by the southeast quadrant study and the proposed general-plan amendment for that part of the city.

Most of the changes approved by the commission would reinforce existing single-family home use in portions of the study area where multiple-family residential developments are permitted by current zoning and the city's general plan.

Planning Director Bill Young explained this week that one purpose of the general plan amendment is to prevent conflicting land uses in this older section of the city.

The southeast quadrant study addresses land use on 1,234 acres bounded by 13th Street on the north, Euclid Avenue on the west and city limits on the south and east.

Within these larger boundaries, the proposed general plan amendment would revise future land uses in 27 subareas covering the 514 acres most directly affected.

The subareas, ranging in size from 2.5 to 82.7 acres, address a variety of land-use problems in the southeast quadrant.

With changes recommended by the commission for 13 subareas, one subarea revision withdrawn and another denied at the Planning Department's suggestion, revisions for 12 subareas totaling 291 acres were continued to a public hearing May 4.

Boundaries for those areas and their proposed land-use revisions are available through the Planning Department at city hall, 460 N. Euclid Ave.

While the changes recommended by the Planning Commission last week generally reinforce existing residential land uses, the remaining proposals for the general plan amendment address many issues.

The portions of the general plan amendment approved last week received little unfavorable comment during the four commission hearings in March.

Young said the changes would lower the potential residential density for the southeast section of the city and help preserve existing housing.

Lower residential density would reduce the area's future demand for public services, Young said.

He said the city's "past experiment" to help revitalize this older section of Upland by allowing higher residential densities "hasn't worked out that well."

Property owners converted garages into living space and "tacked on" dwelling units to existing structures without providing the necessary room for incoming residents, Young explained.

He told the commissioners last week the southeast quadrant has not attracted new higher-density residential developments.

"Wherever possible the developers and property owners will minimize the substitution and instead tack on behind (existing structures)..."

He noted the residential density of the area often seems greater when viewed from the southeast quadrant's alleys than from its streets.

Young added, "Even though it's a little bit expensive to rehabilitate an older unit — $5,000, $10,000, $15,000, $20,000 — it's still a lot less expensive than to create new housing and it does meet the needs of providing housing for low- to moderate-income persons."

He pointed out federal community block grant funds are available, along with other revenue sources, to help rehabilitate older housing.

"I think it's important to note that 95 percent of our housing stock in the nation is existing, only 5 percent is new."

"Something has to be done to retain as much of that 95 percent housing as possible," he commented.

The commission recommended to the City Council that the planning objective policy statement of Upland's general plan be changed from encouraging transition of older neighborhoods from lower to higher densities to urging conservation of existing housing.

Several issues were raised by residents commenting on the subareas the Planning Commission continued for further review.

Realtor Eugene Bello, a member of the Upland Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors, expressed concern over proposed changes limiting available commercial frontage and parking for future developments bordered by residential properties.

Francis Shaw, who presented the commission March 2 with a petition signed by 191 residents, won a revised recommendation for higher density from the planning staff at the March 23 meeting.

He had told the commission a previous recommendation for a density of 4-6 units per acre rather than 7-12 units per acre could harm the "historical importance" of 25.6 acres.

This subarea is roughly bounded by 11th Street on the north, First Avenue on the west, Arrow Highway on the south and Third Avenue on the east.

He explained that many of the owners of older homes have maintained apartments on adjoining small lots.

Several property owners have complained that proposed changes resulting in less-intensive use of their land would hurt their investments.

'Psyop' units use words as weapons

Army reserves train for possible need

By Don Green

At a red-brick building on Seventh Street in Upland, some 180 men and women in the U.S. Army Reserve train once a month in case they are ever needed to help win battles using words as weapons.

The Army Reserve Center, 1284 E. Seventh St., is home for the 15th Psychological Operations Company, whose personnel have learned a variety of skills for two wartime tasks requiring effective communication: propaganda and interrogation.

Wallace Squires, the civilian equivalent of company commander and a sergeant first class in the reserve, said, "That would be the basic mission of the psychological operations company — the gathering of intelligence data to be used in conjunction with propaganda involving the enemy for the purposes of attempting to win battles with words."

He explained that two units making up the Upland-based company are one of five such psychological operations companies in the western United States, with a sixth being formed in Seattle.

The companies are relatively new to the reserve, and Squires said the 15th Psychological Operations Company, or "15th Psyop Company" in military shorthand, has been based at the Maj. Norman E. Thral Reserve Center since October 1975.

Language specialists, mechanics, printers, photographers, technicians for radio and electronic equipment, copywriters and administrators are among the skilled personnel in the psyop companies, he said.

Squires noted that interrogators are required to know a foreign language and that the 15th Psyop Company has reserves who speak Spanish, German, Hungarian, Czechoslovakian and French.

Some reserves are currently learning Russian, he added.

The knowledge of languages would also be used if the reserves were ever activated during war to spread propaganda from rear battle positions abroad.

Squires explained that the Army's basic field equipment for the psyop companies includes a shelter loaded with cameras, engravers, printing presses and whatever else needed for mobile propaganda units on 2½-ton trucks.

Radios, high-powered loudspeakers and film projectors are also used, he said.

Referring to a reporter, Squires added, "Actually we have all the equipment you would have at your plant — maybe a little bit more. We can make our own plates, we have our own inks and papers and all the allied supplies."

Squires used the term "propaganda" in its broader sense: the propagation of ideas, rather than the derogatory meaning connoting deliberate indoctrination or deception.

He called the news media "very effective propagandists" and said propaganda is "prevalent in our everyday lives" through advertising.

"It's an extremely effective tool if it's used properly," he commented.

He noted both propaganda and interrogation techniques vary from situation to situation.

In general, he said, "You reach the threat forces on a very basic level on an individual basis. If a man's hungry, he's not going to be a good fighting soldier. If you offer him food, he's going to come over to your side."

Delivering on promises to give enemy troops food, medical supplies and clothing brings converts, Squires indicated.

"You have to realize that the majority of those people that are out there fighting don't want to be there."

He noted propaganda dates back to the time of Alexander the Great, adding, "It's been used in various forms ever since then."

"It really didn't come into its own until World War II. I think we all remember the stories about Tokyo Rose and Axis Sally, and they were very effective in their ways of propaganda."

Squires called interrogation a "highly technical field."

He noted that in addition to the training offered by the psychological operations company, the Army uses Fort Huachuca in Arizona as sophisticated center for learning interrogation.

"It's a very difficult school. It's very taxing physically and very taxing mentally. They have a high washout rate."

Basically, Squires said, the main tools of successful interrogation are winning trust and breaking down resistance.

"Now, either you've got to prove to him that you're a friend — that you can do him some good if he answers the questions — or you've got to, quite frankly, scare the hell out of him."

Familiar practices of two interrogators playing "good cop, bad cop" roles and denial of sleep are among some of the methods, he indicated.

"There are some methods that are used that the normal person would consider inhumane," Squires conceded.

However, he added, "At time of war, when you can get the proper answers out of persons and save thousands of lives, then you really have to weigh on the balance whether the methods used to get these answers are inhumane or not."

Squires emphasized that successful interrogation could mean lives saved on both sides.

John Marikese, recruiting sergeant at the Army Reserve Center, added, "There's still a code of ethics that these (methods) cannot go beyond the Geneva Convention."

Squires noted friendly persuasion, gaining trust, can be the more successful technique, adding that physical force and coercion often bring inaccurate information.

Squires noted that during training the interrogators themselves must undergo the techniques they would use in wartime so that they gain a feel for what a soldier being questioned is going through.

While interrogation and propaganda might seem to be skills limited to the dire conditions of war, Squires and Marikese stressed that psyop training opens a variety of jobs to Army reserves.

Marikese emphasized the medical, insurance and retirement benefits available through the reserve.

Supervisors act to cut worker disability costs

By PETER WONG
County supervisors decided Monday they will try to control the rising costs of disability retirements by offering less demanding jobs at full pay to the growing number of county employees who qualify for the benefits.
They will also seek the authority to require an applicant for disability retirement to accept a less demanding job unless he shows he cannot handle it.
The supervisors took the actions as part of an attempt to curb the costs of such retirements, as recommended by a report issued two months ago. One of every four retirements is for disability.
"If there's some way an employee can work for his money rather than sending him a check in the mail, it's better than just giving him money, even if he is a little disgruntled," Supervisor Robert L. Hammock said.

The supervisors decided to invoke a state law that permits an employee who is judged disabled to be transferred to a different job if the employee agrees.
The employee would be paid the difference if his salary were less in his new job.
"It goes toward salvaging of individuals rather than retiring them," Richard Yankee, executive secretary of the county retirement board, told the supervisors.
But the supervisors went a step further. They endorsed a change in state law that would give the retirement board the power to force applicants for disability retirement to take alternative jobs unless they couldn't handle them.

Yankee warned the supervisors not to push for such legislation without the support of county employee groups, "because we'd never be able to get the legislation through."
He said he believes public employees' associations could be persuaded to accept such a measure "if there were some sort of restraints built into the legislation ... but just saying we could ... do it, I think, could create some real problems."
However, two supervisors — Hammock and James L. Mayfield — indicated they would rely on counterpressures against public employee groups to push the measure through the state Legislature.
"The last I heard the taxpayers were still paying the bill (for disability retirement) and they're still the boss," Hammock declared.
"If these people want a disability in their pensions, let 'em earn it," Mayfield added.
Supervisor Joseph Kamansky of Upland said that wherever possible, the employee should be given the choice of a less demanding job as an alternative to disability retirement.
Kamansky said he didn't oppose the change in state law the supervisors endorsed. But he said the voluntary approach should be given a chance to work.
Yankee said there are no applicants who would be eligible now to make such a choice. He said he does not expect many to do so.

The proposal assumes that the difference in salaries between an employee's present job and an alternative job would in most cases be less than the disability retirement benefits that would otherwise be paid.
Earlier, Yankee said the changes might discourage some employees from applying for disability retirement because they would feel guilty about turning down less demanding jobs at no change in pay.
"I, for one, would look with interest on how they (employees) are going to explain that to taxpayers and myself," Hammock said. "I'd hope they'd convince me but I doubt it."
The changes are expected to pave the way for a yet-to-be-developed program in which selected county employees are given medical examinations to identify potential physical and mental problems.
The program would allow employees with such problems to be transferred to less demanding jobs before they ever consider filing for disability retirement.
The retirement board must decide first if an employee qualifies for disability retirement before he can be offered a job transfer. The board cannot threaten to deny applications for disability retirement to force employees to accept less demanding jobs.
Two months ago, County Administrative Officer Earl Goodwin's staff issued a report criticizing the county's high number of disability retirements. Kamansky suggested the study as a member of the retirement board.
Of the 1,845 retired county employees in 1977, 491 have been granted disability retirements, or 26.6 percent. That is the third worst among the 20 California counties which run their own retirement programs under a 1937 state law.
Seven years earlier, disability retirements accounted for 144 of the total of 755.
If the 491 employees who have been granted disability retirements had taken regular retirement, the report said, it would have saved taxpayers $700,000 in additional payments.

Headstart expansion approved by county

A major expansion of the federally funded Head Start program for children has been authorized by the county board of supervisors.
The expansion will allow the program to serve an additional 340 children.
The county-run preschool program now serves 1,170 children at a cost of $2 million.
The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare plans to award San Bernardino County the following amounts:

— An additional $735,028 for 340 more children.
— $80,727 for cost-of-living increases in the program.
— $140,420 for one-time-only expansion costs.
The supervisors approved the acceptance of federal money for the startup costs during the two months starting July 1.

County will be represented by four on governing board

San Bernardino County will have what amounts to a record four representatives, including one from Ontario, on this year's executive committee of the Southern California Association of Governments.
The association serves as the regional planning agency for six Southern California counties.
The number of area representatives is of special significance this year because of the development of regional plans for cleaning up air and water pollution. The association has a key role in drafting both plans.
Ontario will have a representative this year because it has been chosen as one of three at-large cities in Southern California entitled to executive committee membership. The city council must name one of its members to that post.

Normally, only two representatives of San Bernardino County sit on the executive committee. One of them represents the county board of supervisors. The other represents the 15 cities in the county.
Supervisor Robert L. Hammock of San Bernardino will be the county's representative on the 20-member executive committee. Supervisor Joseph Kamansky of Upland will be the alternate.
Upland Councilman Hal Bailin currently represents the county's 15 cities on the executive committee. But he is leaving office this week. He did not seek a third council term.
Bailin's alternate, Barstow Mayor George

Goldsmith, lost his reelection bid this week and will also lose his executive committee position.
Bailin said the association's new president, Vice Mayor James Wilson of Long Beach, is expected to appoint a replacement who will serve until the cities decide upon a successor at the association's fall meeting.

HEALTH NEWS...

Dear Doctor:
Lately my left leg has been giving me trouble. I don't know why, but it starts hurting about mid-thigh and goes down. I can't cross that leg because it's actually painful and the only way I CAN SLEEP IS FLAT ON MY BACK. Sometimes I just sit on the floor and massage my leg. It doesn't really help, but it's such a constant pain I can't leave it alone. I'm a perfectly healthy person so I don't understand what's going on. I haven't seen any doctors yet and I'm wondering if Chiropractic is my answer. T.J.

Dear T.J.:
You realize that no doctor of any profession can diagnose your problem through the newspaper. However, your symptoms sound like an irritation of the sciatic nerve, the main nerve supply to the leg. The sciatic nerve is the largest and longest nerve in the entire body. A misalignment in the spinal column can irritate the roots of the sciatic nerve as they pass between the vertebrae in the lower spine. This will allow pain to radiate down your leg. As you said, you rub your leg because it hurts, but your problem may actually be in the lower back. I would recommend a spinal examination as soon as possible to determine if this is indeed the case. One more point - I do have a word of caution for both women and men who wear today's high fashion, high-heeled shoes. Although they're in style, and may actually feel comfortable to some people, standing or walking in them over an extended period of time can put an unnatural strain on your spinal column, with sometimes painful results. # Course will explore punishment sociology

"Sociology of Punishments and Corrections," a UC Extension course that comprises part of the Certificate in Criminal Justice Program, is being offered Thursday evenings in Chino, beginning tonight.
William Perry, Ph.D., program administrator with the California Institution for Men in Chino, will instruct the seminar, scheduled for March 30-June 22, 7-10 p.m., in Room 46 of Chino High School, 5130 Riverside Drive.
The twelve-week course addresses the theories of punishment and treatment used in dealing with convicts and juvenile delinquents. An analysis of the system of behavior modifications used by probation, prison, and parole workers is a special point of emphasis.

How to save a little gas on your next shopping trip.

Next time you're in your local building supply or home improvement store, look for the Gas Saver signs.
They're displayed above do-it-yourself items that can help reduce your gas usage.
And keep your gas bill as low as possible.
All the Gas Saver products are designed for easy installation. And they'll all provide real savings on natural gas, while keeping you comfortable, too.
A water heater blanket, for instance, wraps neatly around your water heater. And the few minutes you've invested can cut the amount of gas you use to heat water by up to 20%.
Or let's say you have a leaky hot water faucet that drips 90 drops a minute. Invest in one of the Gas Saver faucet repair kits and you'll keep about 2100 gallons of hot water from going down the drain every year.
Your participating dealer carries a variety of Gas Saver items and can tell you everything you need to know about installing them.
Let him show you how to turn your next shopping trip into a saving trip.

Scout awards

Carlos Betancourt, 11, of Troop 653, was the hero of the 56th annual dinner of Old Baldy Council, Boy Scouts of America, held recently at the Pomona Elks Lodge.

The youngster received the Medal of Merit Award from the National Boy Scout headquarters for saving another boy from drowning. Carlos, with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Hugo Betancourt of Rancho Cucamonga, and brother David, were vacationing in South America last year. They were watching a diving demonstration at a municipal pool when a 5-year-old youngster emulated the diver and fell into the pool. The child was unable to swim, but Carlos saw the child's plight, jumped into the pool and pulled him from the bottom.

Judge Henry Busch, council advancement chairman, presented the award to the boy.

Another highlight of the meeting was the presentation of Silver Beaver Awards to one woman and three men. This is the highest honor given in scouting to adult leaders for service above and beyond their duty. Recipients were Ed McCracken of Upland and Stewart Perkins, Ron Vinatieri and Pat McLaughlin, all of Ontario.

Jerrold R. Gonce was elected council president for a second term. Serving with him for the coming year will be: Gordon Zwissler, finance vice president; Harry Gifford, administrative vice president; Dr. Richard Kirkendall, treasurer; Don DesCombes, assistant treasurer; and Rick Little, council commissioner.

Representative

Elizabeth Hicks, president of Chapter 210,

California State Employees Association, has been appointed as the West End United Way's state representative for a three year term.

The action took place during a recent United Way board meeting at Montclair City Hall.

Ms. Hicks is an employee of the Chaffey Union High School District. As the state representative, she also will be a United Way board member for three years.

Ralph Bush, board president, announced the following board terms of offices: Don Crawford, George Janesick and Ms. Hicks, three years; Joe Aldren, Jay Holmes and Emma Dagan, two years; and Johnnie Stone, Al Carr and Lauren Wasserman, one year.

Ralph Stillings, executive director of the West End UW, announced that stacker displays which pictorially depict the activities of some WEUW agencies are being placed in some West End banks and savings and loan buildings. This is being done in order to inform both the donors and the public on how the monies raised by the United Way are being spent.

Graduates

West End students who have been awarded advanced degrees at Claremont Graduate School in the mid-year graduating class are the following:

Elizabeth Cramer — master's in government, Donald F. Gradowski — master's in fine arts, Bruce Gulliver — master's in business education, Yassin R. Jafar — master's in government, Kay Ellen Klier — master's in botany, Eric J. McLaughlin — master's in business administration, Robin Merandi — master's in education and Richard K. Williams — master's in business education, all of Upland.

Also, James M. Williams — master's in government and Richard Barnaby — master's in management, both of Ontario; Farideh Aghda'ee — master's in government, Montclair.

Winner

Ruth Aylor of Rancho Cucamonga was named as award winner for "Women Helping Women 1977-1978" sponsored by the Soroptimist International of Ontario.

During the recent award luncheon at the Magic Lamp Inn, Rancho Cucamonga, Mrs. Aylor received a certificate from Jackie Jeffrey, club president, and a proclamation in her honor issued by the City of Upland and presented by Mayor George M. Gibson. The "Women Helping Women" award is given each year to the community woman who is judged to have made the greatest contribution to increasing the status of woman through education, government, arts (media), professions, business-industry or volunteer work.

Mrs. Aylor was nominated by the Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council. The judges were Gordon Ayers, Lois Hanna, Jay D. Holmes, Rose Kelber and Celesta Scott Walters. Mrs. Hanna was award committee chairman.

The award winner has been a community volunteer in many West End groups and activities for the past 25 years. She was a Girl Scout troop leader, neighborhood chairman for two years for Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda, board member for six years and program committee chairman, resident camp director and director of the district camporee, all for two years, all concerning the Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council.

Mrs. Aylor was business manager of the 1965 National Girl Scout Roundup in Farragut, Idaho, and volunteer one month to serve in one of the four camp units. She was director of the 1977 national event for 150 senior Girl Scouts from throughout the United States taking part in the "Tomorrow's Woman in Public Relations" held in Claremont. She has held numerous PTA positions, was on the adult advisory board of the Oasis Youth Center in Ontario, was residential chairman for two years for the West End United Way, and is involved in the Soroptimist Club activities and "S" Club work.

Accepting a certificate for the nominating organization, the Spanish Trails Girl Scouts, was Noralie Clinton, a council board member.

There were 13 clubs or groups submitting names for the judging.

Champion

It took five sets, but Thinh Nguyen (Upland) will reign as the Montclair Table Tennis Club champion as the result of his win over Harold Kopper (Riverside).

In a match that lasted 70 minutes, Nguyen finally gained command with a series of loop drives in the final set. Earlier, the two had been blasting 15-foot drives with authority.

For Nguyen to win, set scores were 20-22, 22-20, 12-21, 21-13 and 21-15.

No-no's

Don't dishwash just the drinks. Wait till dinner is over.

Your open door policy can cost you.

Half loads give you a good sock — right in the pocketbook.

See the dollars drip away? You're in hot water — in more ways than one.

Your lights should go out when you do.

Cooking piecemeal costs as much as a whole meal.

They cost you.

Little careless habits. We all have them. But added together, they cost a lot. In wasted energy and dollars. Happily, the change from careless to careful is not a chore. It actually simplifies your routine. Loading appliances once is certainly quicker than toting two half loads. Shutting doors and windows is no big deal. That's what they're there for. Would you walk around with a hole in your purse? Then shouldn't you zip up on wasted energy? Yes. Yes.

Poor receive legal guidance

The roof leaks and the landlord hasn't fixed it. What are my rights? That is a common question asked by West End residents in legal aid counseling, say representatives of the Western San Bernardino County Bar Association. The counseling is one of the forms of help available locally to people who either can't afford an attorney or don't know where to start looking for one.

- Services include:
- Legal aid, free to people with gross monthly income of $308 if they have one dependent or $100 more with each additional dependent. Phone 983-3653 for information.
  - Legal aid clinics, weekly clinics held in community buildings to give people in the above income categories a chance to ask an attorney legal questions.
  - Tel-law, offering often-sought tape recorded information on 80 legal topics 24 hours a day. To have a specific recording played, phone 983-9676.
  - Lawyers' reference service, providing those who can afford an attorney with the name of one specializing in the kind of legal problems they are concerned about. A half hour initial consultation with an attorney costs $20. Phone 983-3653.

Barry Brandt, Upland attorney who is currently president of the local bar association, said many legal aid queries are concerned with landlord-tenant and domestic relations.

He said a common subject of complaints is lack of maintenance in apartments.

According to Brandt, a landlord is obliged to keep a rental dwelling in a condition in which the roof doesn't leak, the plumbing works and there is hot and cold running water, a working heater and good wiring and lighting.

When an apartment is turned over to a tenant, it should be clean and have adequate rubbish receptacles, he said. He said that if a landlord doesn't make a repair in a reasonable time after a tenant gives notice, the tenant can make the repair and deduct up to one month's rent.

Attorney Larry L. Baumbach, who is chairman of the local bar's legal aid-lawyers' reference committee, said that what constitutes a reasonable time depends, for example, on whether a heater breaks down in July or in the winter.

He said that generally speaking, 30 days is considered to be a reasonable time.

Brandt said legal aid and the lawyers' reference service have long been offered by the local bar association.

He said the legal aid clinics and Tel-law, financed in part by federal funds, have been established in the past year in a cooperative effort by the local and county bar associations.

Legal aid clinics are held 7 to 9 p.m. the first Thursday of each month at The Firehouse, 10585 Central Ave., Montclair; the second Thursday at the community building, 5443 B St., Chino; the third Thursday at Chaffey High School, 1245 N. Euclid Ave., Ontario, and the fourth Thursday at Upland Community Building, 352 E. C St., Upland.

Volunteers aid senior citizens

Senior citizens of West End communities are aided by the West End Volunteer Department of the West End Senior Citizens program, which is looking for volunteers.

Services given by volunteers include visits to shut-ins, emergency transportation provided and shopping done for elderly persons who are unable to do their own errands.

There have been so many requests for services, that the West End Volunteers are seeking additional volunteer help. Persons of all ages are welcome, including college and high school age students who have spare time to give to help others.

There also is a special need for volunteers for a swimming program at a local school, where the pool is heated.

Call 988-6015 for services needed or to volunteer. The volunteer organizer is available between noon and 4 p.m.

YMCA needs big brothers

Big Brothers sought
The West End YMCA is looking for "Big Brothers" to bring joy into the lives of fatherless boys between 6 and 12 years old.

The program, called "Y PALS," is designed to provide a fatherless boy with companionship, love, instruction and the enjoyment of having an adult male as a "Big Brother."

The boy and his "Big Brother" will participate in YMCA sponsored activities, such as trips to the zoo, camp-outs and crafts. The carefully chosen "Big Brother" is encouraged to spend time during the week with the boy.

The purpose of the program, according to Mike Hudson, program director, is to "help a boy, through the guidance of an adult, understand himself and the world around him better."

ORDINANCE NO. 1158
ORDINANCE OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF UPLAND
PARTICULAR TO THE NUMBER, POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE ARCHITECTURAL COMMISSION.

The City Council of the City of Upland does hereby ordain as follows:
SECTION 1.
 Section 9110.129 of the Upland Municipal Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

ARCHITECTURAL COMMISSION/REVIEW

- .010 Intent and Purpose.
- .020 Architectural Commission - Established.
- .030 Powers and Duties.
- .040 Composition.
- .050 Appointment.
- .060 Compensation and Expenses.
- .070 Secretary.
- .080 Meetings and Procedures.
- .090 INTENT AND PURPOSE.

The City Council hereby finds that excessive similarity or dissimilarity, inappropriateness or poor quality of design in the exterior appearance of buildings erected in any neighborhood or in the development and maintenance of structures, landscaping, signs and general appearance affects the desirability of the immediate area and neighboring areas for residential and business purposes or other use, and by so doing, impairs the benefits of occupancy of existing property in such areas, impairs the stability in value of both improved and unimproved real property in such areas, prevents the most appropriate development of such areas, produces degeneration of property in such areas with attendant deterioration of conditions affecting the health, safety, comfort and general welfare of the inhabitants of the City, and destroys the proper relationship between the taxable value of real property in such areas and the cost of municipal services provided therefor.

It is the purpose of this Chapter to hereby create and establish an Architectural Commission in and for the City to prevent these and other harmful effects of such exterior appearances of buildings erected in any neighborhood and thus to promote and protect the health, safety, comfort and general welfare of the community, to promote the public convenience and prosperity, to conserve the value of buildings and encourage the most appropriate use of land within the City of Upland.

.020 ARCHITECTURAL COMMISSION - ESTABLISHED.

.030. POWERS AND DUTIES.
 Except as hereinafter provided the Architectural Commission shall have the following powers and duties:

.010 The jurisdiction of the Architectural Commission shall extend only to proposed buildings, structures and landscaping in the several commercial, industrial and multiple residential zones, and to such developments of two (2) or more single-family units in single family residential zones of the City. The architectural review may be a condition, however, of a conditional use permit or a variance in any single family residential zone or any other zone of the City.

.020 No building permit shall be issued for any such development(s) unless the plans, elevations, signs and landscaping for the proposed buildings or structures have been approved by the Architectural Commission, or by the Council by appeal. Provided, however, that the Architectural Commission shall not have the authority to substantially amend, or cause to be substantially amended, any site plan previously approved by either the City Council, Planning Commission and/or Administrative Committee except as may be specifically authorized by such approving agency. In any case where the Architectural Commission finds a site plan previously approved by any such agency to be unsatisfactory, the Commission may refer such plan back to the approving agency with recommendations for specific revisions.

In the event of conflict between the recommendations of the Architectural Commission and the determination of the approving agency, the decision of the approving agency shall prevail except upon appeal to the City Council in the manner prescribed hereafter.

.030 Reports to City Council. The Architectural Commission shall at least annually give a report to the City Council of its activities, including the number of cases considered by it, in general, the number of approvals, disapprovals and modifications, and the public acceptance of their decisions, together with any other pertinent facts and observations which the Architectural Commission deems pertinent to the effective operation of the Commission and any legislation required for its more effective administration.

.040 COMPOSITION.
 The Architectural Commission shall consist of not less than five (5) members nor more than seven (7) members all of whom shall be voting members.

All members shall have a substantial background in the area of either architecture, art, landscaping or other allied fields.

.050 APPOINTMENT.
 .010 The voting members of the Architectural Commission and their specific number shall be appointed and determined respectively by the Mayor subject to the approval by the Council. The term of the office for voting members shall be four (4) years.

.020 The Mayor, subject to the approval of the Council, may remove any member of the Commission at any time.

.060 COMPENSATION AND EXPENSES.

.070 SECRETARY.
 The Planning Director shall serve as the official secretary to the Architectural Commission.

.080 MEETINGS AND PROCEDURES.

.010 Meeting Schedule. The Architectural Commission shall meet at intervals, at least once each month on regularly scheduled dates. Additional meetings shall be arranged in order to process applications within the time required by this Code.

.020 Rules and Regulations. The Architectural Commission shall adopt rules and regulations for the conduct of its business. A simple majority of the voting members shall constitute a quorum. Cases where there is no agreement shall constitute an automatic appeal to the Council, and the differences shall be submitted as the findings of the Architectural Commission, except that failure to act within sixty (60) days of the filing of the documents requested with the Planning Director constitutes no agreement as defined above.

.030 Procedures.
 .031 The applicant for a building permit, when subject to requirements of this Chapter, shall submit to the Planning Director a site plan, exterior elevations, exterior signs, color scheme, landscape plan and perspective drawings, and such other data as will assist the Architectural Commission in evaluating the proposed building or structure.

Preliminary drawings shall be submitted for review and, if approved, shall serve as a guide in further consideration of the same proposed building or structure. Final plans and elevations shall be drawn to scale upon substantial paper or cloth and shall be of sufficient clarity to indicate the nature and extent of the work and the name and address of the owner, and the person who prepared the plans.

When an attachment or minor addition to an existing building or structure is proposed, drawings at a scale of not less than 1/4" equals 1' ft. shall be submitted describing the exterior elevation and shall indicate the relationship of such proposal to the existing development. Work not thus presented may be rejected by the Planning Director.

.032 The Planning Director shall refer said plans and drawings to the Architectural Commission at its next regular meeting. If said meeting is not scheduled within the thirty (30) day period set for Architectural Control Action, a special meeting shall be called. The Architectural Commission shall act on the application within thirty (30) days after the filing of full and complete data, unless the applicant agrees to an extension of time.

.040 Criteria. The Architectural Commission shall approve the issuance of a building permit in any manner subject to its jurisdiction, if the applicant complies with the following criteria:

.041 The plan for the proposed building, structure and/or landscaping is in conformity with good taste, good design and, in general, contributes to the image of Upland as a place of beauty, spaciousness, balance, taste, fitness, broad vistas and high quality.

.042 The plan for the proposed building or structures indicates that the building is protected against any use thereof, which may tend to make the environment of the building less desirable through noise, vibrations or other factors.

.043 The proposed building, structure or landscaping is not, in its design and appearance, so at variance with the appearance of other existing structure and landscaping in the neighborhood as to cause the nature of the local environment to depreciate materially in appearance and value.

.044 The proposed building, structure or landscaping is in harmony with the proposed developments on land in the general area, with the General Plan for Upland, and with any specific plans adopted pursuant to the General Plan.

If the above criteria are met, the application shall be approved. Conditions may be applied when the proposed building or structure does not comply with the above criteria and shall be such as to bring said building or structure into conformity. If an application is disapproved, the Architectural Commission shall detail in its findings the criterion or criteria that are not met. Bow Legs and Knock Knees
by Harold Berk

Knock knee and bow leg, common childhood problems, probably should be discussed together. It has been pointed out that in many instances, the normal developmental sequence is from mild bowing, to mild knock knee, to a normal situation. So, it may be seen that mild degrees of knock knee or bow leg are to be considered normal quite often.

However, there has to be a point at which normalcy ends and abnormality begins. While some general rules exist, it is best to leave that decision up to your doctor. This is something a Pediatrician probably would observe in a routine examination. If you have any questions, get professional help as soon as possible.

Knock Knee

Knock knee can originate from many sources.

For instance, girls tend to have knock knees more than boys because the thigh approaches the knee from the hip at a wider angle. Or a child can be born with a tendency toward this problem. Sitting and sleeping postural habits contribute to it.

Pronation of the feet could cause it.

Bow leg also can come from many causes, but they tend to be more in the area of acquiring the condition from a specific disease.

Domestic violence hits homes

It has been noted often that ours is the most violent society in the world. United States crime statistics show dramatic highs when compared to those of other nations. Yet domestic violence — which the FBI estimates, particularly in regard to wife beating, occurs three times more often than rape (one every 12 minutes) — virtually goes unnoticed or even reported.

Only recently have women battered by their husbands begun to tell their stories and seek protective action against such abusive treatment. One researcher calculated that between 40 and 50 percent of married women suffered some form of physical assault by their mates during the course of marriage. For many it was a repetitive treatment, for others an occasional attack.

Now a new aspect of domestic violence is in the news: A study by two authors of a book on wife beating, Robert Langley and Richard C. Levy, indicates that there is need to "focus on the other side of the coin, too." It is their amazing conclusion that about 20 percent of husbands in the U.S. are the recipients of beatings by their wives. Stressing the seriousness of domestic violence in this country, Levy noted that we've "got to view this in terms of humanity, not sex." Unfortunately, the reluctance of husbands and wives involved in domestic quarrels to come forward masks any true conception of the extent of the problem.

Police officers, probably more than sociologists, could testify to the frustration of dealing with domestic disturbances. All too frequently wives, though they may call for protection, hesitate to press charges. (Ironically, assault is a criminal act when committed on the street by a stranger but is not considered so between marital partners in the home.)

A battered wife can have a number of reasons for refusing to complain against her husband: fear of further physical harm to herself, worry over how she can support her children if her husband is arrested, and shame in the eyes of friends and neighbors. Police sometimes are assaulted themselves by both husband and wife acting in unison where they suggest to the woman that she accuse him.

A battered husband is even less likely to press charges against a physically abusive wife. His unwillingness stems from such masculine fears as ridicule by other men, sarcastic disbelief, even accusations of wife beating on his part although he was only defending himself. Most importantly, he may worry about how such an incident will reflect on his manhood.

Any resort to the use of physical violence — whether by husband or wife, or both — demonstrates immaturity. Incapable of expressing frustration in words, such a person vents feelings of inadequacy, insecurity, jealousy or resentment physically to provide some measure of ego-satisfaction.

One other regrettable aspect of domestic violence is that the impressions left with children may be transmitted in later years to their own homes and families. Constant exposure to violent behavior leads in turn to acceptance of such conduct as a normal reaction to discord.

Women in poverty outnumber men, 3-2

A.L. of Reseda writes: "I'm finally facing the fact that I'm poor on my secretary's salary. I'm not alone. Most of my women friends who are single and have children can't buy housing, clothing or even sufficient food. Don't tell me to get a better job; I've tried. Does anyone realize how women suffer from poverty today?"

State and federal agencies have only begun to look at women and poverty. We just received a report from the U.S. Department of Labor saying up front that while the economy is improving, women who are concentrated in poverty are apt to stay there — and the number is increasing. The Department of Labor found that poor women outnumbered poor men by four million in 1975. The 15 million women living in poverty accounted for three out of five persons — 58 percent — who are poor in the United States.

The Department of Labor lists these reasons: — Women make less than men; a median of $8,300 per year in 1976. This was 60 percent of men's median salary, $13,800.

This gap has continued to increase over several decades, because women work in low-paying professions. The pay is not increasing and women are not being moved into better paid jobs.

— Women have higher unemployment rates. They can't work their way out of unemployment, as men do.

— Many women have to settle for part-time work because full-time work for women is unavailable.

— "Finally, sex discrimination prevents women — both minority and white — from taking as full advantage of job market opportunities as their male counterparts," says the Department of Labor.

"Such discrimination is often based on notions that women cannot and should not fill the same jobs as men."

Institutionalized poverty for women is what it amounts to. And we can thank this federal agency for calling it as it is. So much for affirmative action programs!

L.J. of San Francisco alerts us to a little-known provision of the 1977 Social Security financing amendments signed by the president last Dec. 20. She asks: Does it actually cut Social Security benefits of married women employees of federal, state and local governments not covered by Social Security?

L.J., we are sorry to say that representatives of the U.S. Social Security offices confirm that it does. "Women Today," published by Today Publications and News Service, Washington D.C., interprets the legislation this way:

"The working woman married, who plans to combine her benefits as a spouse under her husband's Social Security retirement with her own retirement benefits from federal, state, or local government has probably had her future retirement cut about in half — if your work is not covered by Social Security. After 1982, you will be forced to deduct your government retirement benefits from any Social Security benefits you are entitled to collect as a wife or widow."

Wives or husbands average $122 a month and widows or widowers $223 in Social Security benefits, so even a small retirement check will wipe out those benefits. Women average one-third less than men — $327 to $593 — because they are paid less and have worked fewer years for government. Wives, then or widows will suffer.

The only solution is to protest to congressional representatives before the legislation goes into effect in 1982. In effect, Congress and the president have decided that women have no vested right to benefits as wives and mothers even though they work and their husbands have paid Social Security taxes for many years. Our advice, let your representatives know how you feel now. In a few years, your only choice will be to face poverty.

Book answers boys' sex lines

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The next time you're at a drive-in movie, and your date asks, "Would you like to get in the back seat?" try countering with a line of your own: "No, I'd rather sit up here with you!"

Comebacks like this one can avoid a lot of trouble for many young women, according to psychologist and Syracuse University professor Dr. Sol Gordon.

Boys always have had lines to try to entice girls: "Show me that you care." "Everyone else is doing it." "Why not? Is it me?" Of course, girls who want to are going to have sex, but what worries Dr. Gordon is that, through a variety of lines, many are cajoled into sexual activity they don't want to have.

Now Dr. Gordon has started a crusade to wipe lines out. "We have a crisis," he says. "There are one million pregnancies among teens each year — one in every twenty girls! Two-thirds are unmarried and wish they weren't pregnant."

To help girls recognize lines, Dr. Gordon has gathered some of the most-used ones in a forthcoming Bantam paperback, You Would If You Loved Me — named after what he calls the all-time runaway hit line. "A lot of girls have been swept off their feet by that one," he says. "Well, any boy who says sex is the only way a girl can express affection for him is exploiting her. Unfortunately, we still have girls even today who define themselves in terms of whether or not a boy wants them — especially younger girls, who are more vulnerable."

Law extends deadline for tax postponement

New legislation has reopened the filing period for the senior citizens property tax postponement program administered by the Franchise Tax Board and broadened requirements to make more homeowners eligible.

Senior citizens' applications to postpone payment of their 1977-78 property taxes will be accepted through April 17 under the new law, according to Don Whitney, Franchise Tax Board Senior Citizens Program Director.

Application forms and instruction booklets are now available in the Franchise Tax Board district offices. Written and telephoned requests for them will be filled promptly.

Whitney said homeowners who filed claims that were disallowed under the program's original limitations will be automatically reconsidered for eligibility. Their claims are still on file.

They should not file new applications but should wait to receive notices from the department, he said. This will help prevent delays in issuing the certificates used to postpone property taxes under the program.

The property tax postponement program provides that the state will pay all or part of the property tax on eligible senior citizens' homes. The state places a lien on the property as security for the taxes paid and adds simple interest of 7 percent annually to the amount.

The program was established by law enacted late in the 1977 legislative session. The original filing period ended Jan. 31. Under the original requirements, nearly 12,000 senior citizens qualified for the program.

Changes in eligibility requirements made by the new law are retroactive. They do not affect homeowners who already have qualified for the program, but they make many more homeowners eligible to postpone their 1977-78 taxes, as well as taxes in future years.

Homeowners who were 62 years of age by March 15 may qualify. The original requirement was that they must have been 62 by Dec. 31, 1976.

Other major changes include: — Duplexes, multiple dwellings, farm homes, and other residences that are taxed as part of larger units of real estate, which were previously ineligible, are now eligible for postponement of part of the tax.

— Senior citizens who are co-owners of their homes with their children or grandchildren are no longer disqualified if the children are under 62 or do not live in their homes.

— It is no longer necessary that the home have a homeowners property tax exemption.

There was no change in the total household income limit, which is $20,000, or the requirement that owners have at least 20 percent equity in their homes. Cooperative housing remains ineligible until the 1978-79 tax year, as in the original law.

Applicants who qualify will receive two certificates from the State Controller, which can be taken to the local tax collector to be used for payment of property tax.

Homeowners who already have paid the first or both installments of their 1977-78 property taxes will receive refunds within 30 days from the county if they qualify for postponement.

He said those who apply now should still pay their second installment, due April 10, to avoid the possibility of a penalty in case they do not qualify. The payment will be refunded if they qualify. No late penalty or interest will be charged those who qualify.

Senior citizens may call the Franchise Tax Board toll-free numbers, (800) 852-5711 for information, and (800) 852-7700 to request forms, or address forms requests to Franchise Tax Board, Sacramento, Calif. 95867.

Older people receive home sale tax break

With the price of houses going up every day, selling a home you have lived in for several years can be a revealing experience. The value of your home has probably skyrocketed.

While it's nice to make a profit on the sale of your home, the thought of paying taxes on that profit probably is not so nice. But, if you are 65 years or older, sold your home in 1977, and meet a couple of requirements, you may be eligible for a larger tax break than in past years. In fact, claiming this break on the sale of your home can save you many dollars on your 1977 federal income tax return.

If the adjusted sales price of the home you sold is $35,000 or less, you can exclude the entire gain from the sale of the home and pay no taxes on your profit. This means that if you bought a home for $15,000 in 1957 and sold it in 1977 with an adjusted sales price of $35,000, you would pay no taxes on your $20,000 profit.

If the adjusted sales price is more than $35,000, the tax break is prorated. In the past, the full tax break could be taken only if the adjusted sales price was $20,000 or less. Of course, as indicated, you must be 65 years to benefit from this break.

When the law speaks of adjusted sales price, it means the amount you receive after paying selling commissions and certain allowable fixing-up expenses. For example, if you sell your home for $45,000, pay a selling commission of $1,500, and incur allowable fixing-up expenses, such as $500 for painting the interior of your home, your adjusted sales price is $43,000.

To report the sale of your home you use Form 2119, "Sale or Exchange of Personal Residence." After entering your sales price, selling commissions and fixing-up expenses on the proper lines of the form, and calculating your adjusted sales price, you then complete the form to determine the amount of gain — if any — that is taxable.

Form 2119 should be attached to your tax Form 1040, and the amount of taxable gain (after capital gain provisions) is ultimately added to the rest of your taxable income on Form 1040. Bear in mind that you must use the 1040 form to claim this tax benefit.

Now what are the requirements for claiming the exclusion on the sale of a personal residence by an older resident?

First, you must have owned and used the property as your principal place of residence for at least five years within an eight-year period ending on the date of sale. This means that a beach or other vacation home would not qualify for the exclusion, nor would a home you purchased four years ago.

The second requirement is that you must not have used the tax exclusion before, because it may only be used once in your lifetime. If the property is jointly owned, either person may take the exclusion.

More information on the sale of a home by older residents is available free from the IRS in Publication 523, "Tax Information on Selling or Purchasing Your Home," and Publication 554, "Tax Benefits for Older Americans."

Tax Tips

Credit allowed for child's home

Individuals with a total income of less than $8,000 in 1977, and who maintained a home for at least one dependent child, may be entitled to as much as $400 from the federal government this year.

The money is in the form of an earned income credit claimed on this year's tax return, according to William H. Connitt, district director of the Internal Revenue Service in Southern California.

The credit is 10 percent of the first $4,000 or less of earned income, to a maximum payment of $400. For those persons who earned more than $4,000 but less than $8,000, the credit is reduced by an amount equal to 10 percent of the amount which exceeds $4,000.

It is based on all sources of earned income, not dividends and interest, Connitt added. Persons who want to know if they satisfy the earnings qualifications should figure in not just wages, but also salaries, tips, and other employee compensations.

"The credit is not restricted to married taxpayers filing a joint return. Single individuals who meet the qualifications may also claim the earned income credit," said Connitt.

There are also requirements related to making a home for a child, Connitt noted. "Individuals must pay more than half the cost of maintaining a household in the United States and must live in that home for the entire year," he explained.

At least one of their children must also live in that home for the entire year, except for temporary absences for school attendance or vacations. The child must be under 19 years of age or a full-time student or a disabled dependent child.

Taxpayers who filed an income tax return last year will find information and instructions for claiming the credit in this year's tax packages. Additional information, forms, assistance, and a free publication, Number 596, entitled "Tax Benefit for Low-Income Individuals," are available at local IRS offices.

Taxpayers may also call the IRS toll-free telephone number, 1-(800)-242-4585, for the location of their nearest VITA center which provides free income tax assistance.

Malpractice war starts new phase

Dr. Franklin Peterson Comstock III, came into my office one afternoon last week. Since he doesn't make house calls, I figured he didn't come to treat my flu.

And since he never invited me to go golfing with him, or even to go to lunch, I also figured that it wasn't a social call. I figured right. This was a purely business trip.

"I want you to write me up," said Comstock.

I looked at him blankly, trying to fully understand what he had just said.

"I want you to do a story about me. A big one."

"But, Comstock," I said, "everytime I've done a story about you, you've turned your attorney loose on me, and claimed that my reporting hurt the medical profession. Why are you so eager this time?"

"What were most of the other stories about that you've done?" Comstock asked rhetorically.

"About malpractice, but —"

"Well, this time I want you to report on malpractice."

"Comstock, have you gone bonkers? You want me to report on malpractice?"

"That's right. But this time I'm the good guy. I just won a case."

"Well, that certainly is news!" I said, grabbing a sheaf of paper and my best felt-tip pen.

"How'd it happen?" I asked. "Did you go back to school? Take some refresher courses?"

"Nah, none of that. In fact, I didn't do anything different on this case than on any of my others."

"Then," I asked a bit incredulously, "how did you win this time?"

"I sued the patient. Sued him for everything he's got."

"You sued the patient?" I asked. "For what?"

"For incompetence."

I put my pen down and turned on the tape recorder. I didn't want to miss a word of this intriguing discussion. "Tell me, Comstock, how can a doctor sue a patient for incompetence? Isn't it just the other way around usually?"

"Usually, but we — that's the courts and me — those courts are the nicest people — anyhow, we determined that the patient was incompetent since he knew about my past record of malpractice suits and still came to see me. Now, THAT'S incompetence."

"How did you get away with it?"

"Precedent. That's what the law is all about. Precedent. If something happens once, it happens all the time."

"Make sense, Comstock. What do you mean by precedent?"

"Well, it seems that a precedent was established in San Bernardino County," Comstock explained calmly. "A newspaper out there sent a bunch of reporters to a county health officer."

"And the county health officer was incompetent?" I asked.

"Of course not! Just listen. And they got him to write out a bunch of duplicate prescriptions. Then, they took the prescriptions around to a bunch of pharmacies, and found out that there were very wide variations of prices."

"They found out that they were being charged prices higher than those posted ... and for drugs that weren't ordered ... and a whole lot of other problems. Man, there were quite some variations."

"So, how does that affect you?"

"I'm not finished. Now, under the old way of doing things, the investigators and courts would investigate the pharmacies —"

"Makes sense to me."

"But, they didn't. The county's pharmacy association claimed 'foul' and investigated the doctor and the newspaper for fraud. They claimed that a doctor has to fill out a prescription for a specific complaint, and that the reporters had no right doing what they did."

"Naturally, they didn't have a case," I said naively. "You kidding? They had every kind of a case. They went to the Board of Medical Quality Assurance to investigate the doctor, but the board never did anything to the doc. So, they went to the D.A. and the state attorney general. But they refused to prosecute the newspaper. Claimed some silly excuse like freedom of the press."

"Well, that about wrapped it up didn't it?"

"Not quite. The pharmacists then went to the courts — marvelous people, them judges — and got an injunction against the newspaper. The judge said that the newspaper couldn't print its story again. Then the pharmacists filed a civil suit against the newspaper."

"Let's see if I've got this right," I said. "Pharmacists in San Bernardino County were charging high prices and not filling the prescriptions properly."

"Not all of them. Just a few. Most pharmacists are really nice people."

"I agree, but a few of them had problems."

"Right."

"And the reporters from a newspaper found out about this and launched an investigation."

"Right again."

"But instead of an investigation against the pharmacies, an investigation was launched against the newspaper —"

"For a writer, you sure catch on fast."

"Then the courts issued an injunction against the newspaper, and the pharmacists filed a suit."

"Now you've got it. So, you see, we don't have any more malpractice worries. The courts have seen the errors of their ways and now they're on our side. And it's about time."

"Why, that poor S.O.B. who I made a mistake on — after all, sometimes it is hard to tell the difference between a kidney and a gall bladder — got sued by me, and we WON. We won. Do you hear? We won! He should have been more careful when he selected his surgeon."

"I couldn't be more in agreement with you," I said, turning off my tape recorder, putting my felt-tip pen away, crumpling up my notes, and thanking Comstock for his news tip.

"Miss Stump," I said to my secretary. "Please call up the med school and see if they have any openings."

Legislators can lose sight of real world

By H. L. "Bill" Richardson

There is a story about a teacher who asked her class of 10-year-olds to write a short story about a poor family. One of the students was a girl whose family was extremely rich. Her story was as follows:

"Once upon a time there was a poor, poor family. The father was poor, the mother was poor, the children were poor, the butler was poor, the chauffeur was poor, the gardener was poor," etc., etc., etc.

It's a good little story because it clearly points out that one's perspective of life has a lot to do with one's surroundings. The same is true of a full-time legislator. One tends to lose perspective with the real world.

Legislators are continually surrounded by people who have a vested interest in government. Most of these groups and individuals perceive government as the source for their financial existence. They all — including full-time legislators — prosper on the structure of government.

Most have a vested interest in seeing the government grow larger, even some of those who supposedly are in office to keep government under control. The more complicated the structure, the more need of their services. Hundreds of thousands of governmental workers are daily enmeshed in the dynamics of state, local and federal government.

The why's and wherefore's of the private sector is a foreign world to the vast majority of those who snuggle around the breast of government.

In the free market, the daily toil of servicing the needs of customers, the interaction of free trade, the pleasing of a boss or keeping employees happy, worrying about paying suppliers, maintaining good credit, getting to work on time, working overtime to keep a client's needs — in other words, keeping the present mousetrap in good repair or building a better one — takes a kind of thought process that is alien to the vast majority of those associated with government.

Like the little rich girl, those in governmental service, see most things in relationship to their surroundings. Is it any wonder that those who deal daily with regulations think in terms of controlling all things? Is it not natural that legislators and government officials offer as solutions to all problems, laws, regulations and restrictions? Is it surprising that they think in the limited terms of their own knowledge?

People relate to their philosophical environment and tend to see most solutions to human problems in relationship to that which they are familiar with. In other words, governmental workers will inevitably perceive the structure of government as the methodology for all human action.

One can hardly expect those who reside in government and live upon its structure to view themselves as the problem or perceive that non-governmental action could possibly be a better solution than intervention.

It is the nature of government to grow larger. Those who gravitate to or serve in government are usually people who perceive government as a tool of social good and one can hardly blame them for following their own convictions. One can hardly accuse them of wasting taxpayer's money when they view themselves as philanthropists backed by the public treasury.

For every real or imagined social ill there will be somebody already in government who will expect the legislature to pass a law and create a new agency to pursue the solution to the inequity.

Is it any wonder that whenever an inequity is discovered in government, the answer by government is another agency to oversee the problem? We have the Fair Political Practices Commission that oversees the legislature. We have regulatory commissions that oversee governmental debts.

March 30, 1978

We abound in commissions and committees and overview bureaucracies, and like Topsy, every year the bureaucracy finds new answers of government to problems that were created by government in the first place.

Government has its nature, and if Americans don't discover it soon and take corrective action through their power at the polls, then government will continue to grow.

Government growth will not reverse itself, no more than a pig will stop eating. Their natural constitution is to expand. Both must be denied free access to food.

The feed of government is taxpayer's money, and until this appetite is controlled through limitations imposed either by frugal-minded legislators or constitutional spending limitations, then expect nothing else from government but growth, regulation, and loss of personal and economic freedom.

The choice is personal freedom or bondage. We don't need an external enemy to put the chains upon our legs. We — by our lack of action, complacency, and ignorance to the nature of government — can shackle ourselves.

(Richardson, a Republican, is state senator from the 25th District, which includes La Verne and San Dimas.)

Politics: life of nation

Professors co-author 'Pursuit of Happiness'

Chaffey College Professor Myron Roberts and Cal-Poly (Pomona) Professor John Moore have co-authored a study of American government and society "The Pursuit of Happiness," published this month by The Macmillan Co.

Intended as a textbook for college classes in American government and civilization, the book has already been adopted by several colleges and universities in the Midwest and California.

Roberts, a Chaffey College English and journalism professor, has authored half a dozen books and hundreds of magazine pieces, including the best-selling "Begatting of a President."

For the title of their book, Roberts and Moore borrowed Thomas Jefferson's phrase, "The Pursuit of Happiness," explaining that it "best expresses what American politics has been and is about."

The authors have explored their subject beyond the mere mechanics of government and examined politics "as the sum of the ideas, ideals, passions, and actions that engage the whole nation." Their preface states that they have "tried to catch not only the words but the music of an exuberant democracy."

The book differs from conventional political science texts in that it examines such humanist studies as mass media, pop culture, literature, sociology and philosophy which bear upon the daily lives of people attempting to function in an organized society. Politics is viewed not as a science, a vocation, or a racket, but as the life of a nation.

New local music theater will open in big red and white tent

A music tent theater is coming to the West End.

Called the West End Theater, a big red and white striped tent will be raised in Bear Gulch, just east of Sycamore Inn, Rancho Cucamonga. Greg Hinrichsen of Rancho Cucamonga, will be the managing director, and four musical productions have been scheduled.

"Sound of Music" will open June 22. "Godspell" on June 27. "Hello Dolly" on July 18 and "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" on July 7.

"Music Tent is the first venture of the West End Theater Inc., a non-profit, tax exempt corporation," Hinrichsen said. "Our goal is to produce the finest in live musical theater and to provide an opportunity for talented performers to improve their skills working in a producing theater situation on a close to professional level as we can attain."

Hinrichsen is a graduate of Alta Loma High School. He graduated from the theater arts department, Chaffey College, in 1974, and received a theater arts degree from California State University, Fullerton, in 1977. He plans to continue his studies toward a master's degree in theater arts.

Dr. Dean Hess, member of the department of theater at Cal State, Fullerton, will direct the opening show, "Sound of Music," and the closing show of the season, "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." Hess earned his doctorate in musical theater at the University of Southern California.

C.A. Sheppard, theater arts department faculty member for nine years at Chaffey College, will direct "Godspell."

Advance season tickets are now available and may be secured by calling Hinrichsen at 982-5736.

Pio Pico home recalls magnificence of past

The home of the last Mexican governor of California recalls the days of magnificent haciendas, studded with sombreroes, festive dances, and grand elegance. Once a sprawling estate, the adobe home and property of Pio Pico has met with disaster many times over but it survives today through the efforts of a few historically minded citizens of southern California.

Situated in downtown Whittier at Seventh Street and Whittier Boulevard in southeastern Los Angeles County, the home of Pio Pico, decayed and dilapidated at the beginning of this century, is now a state historic park. The home and property, according to the National Automobile Club, was called La Hacienda del Rancho Paso de Bartolo Viejo, or, as Pico affectionately called it, El Ranchito.

Pio Pico was born in 1800 at the Mission San Gabriel. Pico's father was French, his mother Mexican-Spanish. He was well educated in the Spanish language and his family owned vast holdings of land, cattle, and horses. In the early 1820s, Pico served as a member of the Diputacion, a legislative body of early Mexican California and he even served as interim governor for 20 days in 1833. Pico inherited all his family's wealth and holdings in 1832 and he became a powerful man in southern California.

The original El Ranchito was built in 1826 near the banks of the San Gabriel River. It had 33 rooms.

El Ranchito was the smallest of Pico's holdings yet it comprised nearly 9,000 acres. The home was said to have been the first two-story adobe built in California. He expanded, repaired, and refurbished the home continuously for nearly seventy years.

Pio Pico lived to the ripe old age of 94, but his political career ended disastrously and he died almost a pauper.

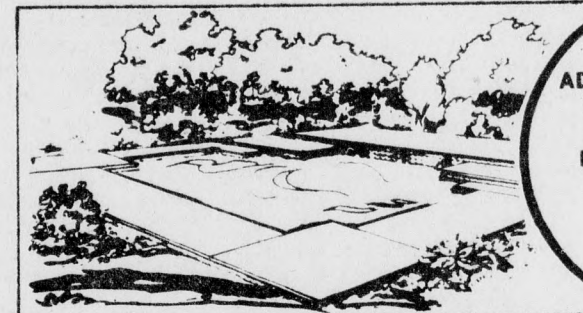

Business shortcomings forced Pico to leave El Ranchito in 1891 and he spent his remaining years in Los Angeles penniless. In 1906, the Governor Pico Museum and the Historical Society of Whittier began much-needed repairs to the home. Pico's El Ranchito was turned over to the state of California in 1914.

Boat launching marina to open at Salton Sea

Diane Edwards of the Imperial County Parks and Recreation Department has good news for anglers who would like to launch their boats at the southern end of the Salton Sea.

Red Hill Marina is expected to be opened for trailer-boat launching.

Ms. Edwards said a Public Works Department crew has been dredging marina channels to remove silt deposited by the Alamo River. These deposits and rising water have made it impossible to use the boat launching ramp at the marina for some time. At present only car-top boats can be launched there.

The high level of the Salton Sea has caused the closing of some boat-launching areas, but at least four are available in addition to Red Hill Marina. They are North Shore Marina and Bombay Beach on the eastern side of the sea, and Desert Shores and Lido Palms on the western side.

Glenn Black, Department of Fish and Game fishery biologist at the sea, said Bob's Playa Riviera is sometimes available, and that a dredge is maintained there for keeping it open.

Still another boat access will be available about May 30 when the state Department of Parks and Recreation reopens the launching ramp at the Salton Sea State Recreation Area on the northeast shore.

The ramp will be a temporary single-lane fiber glass structure first tested in Vietnam.

Global manners make foreign food more fun

The kimono-clad waitress bows slightly and offers you a moist towel on a rattan tray. Uncertainty sets in. Now what? Moisten your mandible? Clean your clavicle?

According to Marjabelle Stewart, mentor of manners, the moist towels, called oshibori and found in Japanese restaurants, are for cleaning the hands before dining.

Mrs. Stewart is an expert on global globbing in good taste. She spent many years among foreign dignitaries in Washington, D.C., teaching the elite to eat with elan. Working with the chief of protocol, she advised families, who would be traveling abroad in an official capacity, on the proper manners for all kinds of occasions with a foreign flavor. Author of several etiquette books, Mrs. Stewart is now emissary for the frozen potato people.

According to Mrs. Stewart, ethnic etiquette isn't only for the elite, however. Along with those who breakfast in Belgium, lunch in Liberia and sup in Spain, are millions who are discovering the delights of dining with a foreign flair in their own home towns. The ethnic eatery is the place to be seen. "And," says Mrs. Stewart, "you'll feel most comfortable if you're seen partaking properly. What's polite in Poughkeepsie could be rude in Rumania."

For instance, in a Japanese restaurant it is considered correct to hold the rice bowl close to your mouth and, of course, to use chopsticks to carry the food to your waiting lips.

If you find yourself actually in Japan, be sure to say "Thank you" before and after the meal. You are expected to remove your shoes if there is a tatami (woven straw) mat on the floor, says Mrs. Stewart. In rural Japan the diner must keep eating all that is offered, even if he is full. And in all of Japan, slurping noises when eating indicate enjoyment.

Mrs. Stewart reports that Continental manners are being seen more and more here in the States. "It's not at all unusual," she says, "to see diners holding their forks in their left hands and their knives in their right hands, and eating with their left hands as they do in Europe." Europeans also keep their right hands on the table, at about wrist length, instead of on their laps, which is considered rude.

If you are in a European eatery, don't expect to find a glass of water. You must ask for the water — and the ice. But why bother? The wine that is served is bound to be delicious!

In Germany and Austria you'll get a sandwich served on a little wooden board. Don't pick it up — use your knife and fork. Europeans eat nothing with their fingers — not even french fries. ("Of course," asserts Mrs. Stewart, "in the United States, any way you eat a french fry is all-right.")

In Holland, or in Dutch restaurants in this country, you will find a fish fork and fish knife. The short, flat fork has three large tines. The wide, tapered knife is excellent for removing fish bones.

Another Dutch specialty is a potato spoon which is round with a lip on each side — so designed to keep the potatoes from falling onto the table. Mrs. Stewart would like to see the potato spoon used in this country. "No one should chance dropping a tater tot," she said.

In Ethiopia, as in other Arab countries, one eats from a communal pot with the right hand. Since the left hand is used for sanitary purposes, this custom is adhered to strictly. Not too many years ago, an Ethiopian who ate with his left hand was punished by having his right (eating) hand cut off. He would then starve to death. And you thought your Mother was strict!

Our own state of Hawaii also has a dish eaten with fingers from a communal pot — poi. Poi is a glutinous substance made from taro root. It is eaten by putting the index and middle finger in the pot and licking them off. Sharing poi is a very social thing to do... much like eating fondue, which is a Swiss dish.

Everyone likes to be social when they dine. The French have carried this to the extreme and aim for an air of style and elegance. A French meal can be a "masterpiece," reports Mrs. Stewart. She says there is complete attention to detail with an "interweaving" of fine food, good company, sparkling conversation, beautiful service, fresh flowers, and the ever-present wines.

However, a guest in a French home or restaurant need not be intimidated by the array of wine glasses and silverware.

Mrs. Stewart says, "The fork and large spoon at the top of the plate are for dessert. When the meal begins, start by using the silverware farthest from your plate and work your way in. Your dinner fork will be removed with your dinner plate. Your dinner knife should be left resting on the small crystal or silver knife holder and used again for the cheese course."

Even in a private home in France, there may be three or four wine glasses per person. Mrs. Stewart says, "In a French home it is considered rude to leave wine in a glass. However, it is perfectly permissible to signal the butler that you've had enough."

"If you find yourself confused, watch what your hostess does," advises Mrs. Stewart, "and just follow her lead."

Course after course, the French meal goes on. It is not unusual for the meal to continue for 2½ hours. It is perfectly all right to smoke between the courses — cigarettes only, no cigars and pipes.

Following dinner in France, the guests adjourn to the salon (living room) for coffee, brandy and bon bons. After an especially large meal, with many wines, cold orange juice is also served just before the guests depart.

Interestingly, the English divide the sexes after dinner. The men remain in the dining room for port and cigars while the ladies retire to the living room for coffee. In France, the men and women stay together for coffee and liquors.

Mrs. Stewart further advises that one never tips the maids who serve dinner in a European home, but, if you are a guest overnight, you are expected to leave a small tip on the dresser.

TASTY TREAT — Guess Whats can be an April Fool's Day delight for young and old. They aren't any joke because the cupcakes are delicious with the tangy flavor of grapefruit in the frosting. The decorations are munchy, good butterscotch morsels made in question marks.

Guess the secret ingredient

April Fool's Day is almost here, and as everyone knows, this is the day when zany tricks are played.

Why not add to the fun of this frolicsome day by making "Guess Whats"?

Here is the "Guess Whats" recipe as developed in the test kitchen.

ETHNIC MANNERS— Taking a trip? Or just seeking the style for your local ethnic eatery? Different countries observe varying manners. For example, for using exotic eating implements in Holland, France and Ethiopia, "watch your hostess," advises Marjabelle Stewart, international etiquette expert. By comparison, the American way seems simpler.

Worm recipe contest already getting entries

"Take two plates, two worms and a bottle of ketchup. Mix 'em together and try it. If it doesn't taste good, then add more ketchup."

Several hundred recipes have already been submitted for the 1978 Local and Third Annual National Earthworm Recipe Contests conducted by North American Bait Farms of Ontario, and its distributors. The above recipe was turned in by a third grader.

According to Ed Hager, NABF Manager, earthworms are relatively tasteless, particularly when they are used as an ingredient in a recipe such as cookies or a casserole.

"They do, however," he added, "provide a high amount of protein in the diet." Ron Gaddie, NABF President and Founder, indicated that the primary reason for holding a nationwide earthworm recipe contest is to create an interest in worms and their potential value, not only as a food source, but as a method of removing biodegradable waste and of treating the soil for agricultural purposes.

North American Bait Farms is presently completing a study on annelid consumption and anticipates marketing in the near future a waste disposal system where worms eat the biodegradable waste; and non-biodegradable waste, such as glass, plastic, metal and rubber, is recycled. Test projects for major metropolitan areas have already proven the concept.

The earthworm and its waste product, called castings, have been in use by organic farmers for years. The worm structures and aerates the soil, and castings are generally felt to be the most effective and ecologically safe fertilizer on the market.

Local contest deadline is April 20. Mail entries to North American Bait Farms, P.O. Box 3037, Ontario.

Inexperienced worker can do spring gardening, landscaping

The recent heavy rains that ended California's drought have turned thousands of backyards and gardens a bright shade of green not seen since homeowners cut down or omitted watering as a conservation measure.

This means that once again springtime brings yardwork and landscaping — especially in many homes where lawns will have to be totally renovated.

Done professionally by a landscaper, that can be a costly project. However, as a do-it-yourself task, the job can be done with proper equipment by even the most inexperienced or unskilled of householders at relatively little cost.

Neighborhood rental centers maintain an extensive inventory of appropriate equipment which can do the job quickly, easily and inexpensively.

Spreaders, aerators, sod cutters, tillers, renovators, small tractors, augers, lawn thinners, rollers and power mowers are just a few of time-and-money-saving tools available at California Rental Association member dealerships.

The statewide association of 850 equipment rental dealers offers several suggestions to help the do-it-yourselfer tackle a spring landscaping project.

— The popularity of renting makes it necessary for customers to reserve yard equipment ahead of time. Demand for this type of equipment is heaviest on spring weekends.

— Prepare for the job before picking up the machine. When renting the equipment for an extended period of time, ask the dealer for extra fuel so as not to have to return for it in the middle of the job. Since some equipment operates on special fuel mixture, use only that provided by the rental center.

— When renting large equipment, drive a vehicle large enough to pull or carry the machinery. Large tillers and aerators come with trailers. (There's a small charge for the trailer hitch).

— Listen to the dealer's instructions and watch his demonstration carefully before leaving the facility. Many dealers have printed instruction sheets to take home. Movies or slide presentations showing how to operate the equipment are not uncommon and are most helpful.

— Pay special attention to gears and speed controls on large machinery. Know how to start and stop the equipment.

— Although renting equipment and doing the job yourself saves a great deal of money, there are some ways to save even more.

— Clearly understand the rate structure. Most equipment is available on an hourly basis, with considerable savings for full-day rentals. A cash deposit is usually required, and many items have a two-hour minimal rental.

— Sharing the equipment with a neighbor can make a full-day's rental most economical.

— Prepare the ground to be worked before picking up the equipment. The ground should be soaked several days before tilling and then allowed to dry out a bit. The area to be worked should also be cleared prior to renting the equipment.

— If the machine breaks down while in use, call the rental dealer immediately. Most dealers charge for total time out unless you inform them of any malfunctions.

— Operate the equipment slowly. Trying to rush the job can lead to equipment breakage, and you may be charged for it.

— Many rental centers carry a damage waiver in their rental agreements to reduce customer liability in case of accidental damage.

A few safety tips are also in order.

— To avoid damage or injury, know how to stop the engine quickly.

— Keep hands and feet away from moving parts. Stop the engine and disconnect the spark plug wire before attempting to clean clogged blades.

— Never leave the engine running while unattended.

— Keep children and pets away from the machinery while in operation. Rotary mowers often throw debris at high speeds.

LAWN SEEDING — A lawn roller is used when preparing an area for seeding. When filled with water, the 20-gallon roller weighs about 230 pounds and smooths uneven surfaces.

Condition garden's soil before planting

Before you plant your spring vegetable garden or colorful annuals, plan on conditioning your soil. Even heavy clay soils can produce an array of flowers, fruits and vegetables if they are properly conditioned.

University of California Cooperative Extension specialists refer to the process of improving clay soils as aerating the soil. Sandy soils can be improved with the addition of moisture retaining organic matter. Even ideal garden soils need attention from time to time to replenish organic matter and maintain a healthy soil structure.

To condition your soil, simply follow these directions: — Spread a 2-to-4-inch layer of either redwood or fir bark chips over the proposed garden. At the same time distribute a one-half-inch layer of any good compost material you may have.

— If the soil is highly alkaline, add gypsum. About 35 to 50 pounds per 1,000 square feet is usually sufficient to correct the situation. Adding up to 150 pounds per 1,000 square feet will improve water penetration.

— Buy a pelletized form of a good chemical fertilizer such as a 10-10-5. Sprinkle fertilizer over the garden area — about 2,025 pounds per 1,000 square feet.

— Work the bark chips, fertilizer, compost material into the soil with a rototiller. If you do not have a rototiller, you can rent one from a garden supply store.

— Should the garden area be so situated that a rototiller cannot be used, use a good sharp spade and work the above materials into the soil manually.
